

CALL FOR PAPERS

Mexican Studies/Estudios Mexicanos (MS/EM) invites the submission of manuscripts for publication.

MS/EM is a bilingual journal dedicated to publishing scholarship pertaining to Mexico, broadly defined. The journal engages a range of disciplines, fields, and theoretical perspectives to understand social, cultural, political, and economic issues relevant to Mexico, past and present. We seek to foster collaborations amongst academics across international borders to publish scholarly articles, review essays, and book reviews that promote discussions and interdisciplinary debates regarding Mexicans and/or Mexico.

At a critical time when key issues regarding Mexico and its nationals in the country and abroad occupy a central place in public debates, MS/EM is a premier outlet in which to publish robust and ground-breaking scholarly contributions that can inform and deepen the wider conversations on these topics from different disciplinary perspectives. We welcome original submissions in either English or Spanish from history, anthropology, sociology, political studies, cultural studies, and the humanities that address issues pertaining to Mexico, its relations to the United States and to other countries in the Americas and beyond. The journal also publishes special issues and thematic sections that provide an opportunity for showcasing innovative research on critical and timely topics.

Original and previously unpublished manuscripts should be submitted via Scholastica. Please review the journal's author guidelines prior to submission. All editorial inquiries, including proposals for special issues, should be addressed to: Christian Zlolniski, mseditor@ucpress.edu
